BasketDudes is a PvP (Player vs Player) basketball MMO game.

Each user gets a basic team of players when he starts playing, but soon he can improve his team by playing matches and gaining points or by buying virtual money to buy elements and strengthen his team. The game includes an experience system, allowing players to level up and improve their attributes, resulting in better running, shooting or jumping.

The players are independent characters and are collectible, each one with its own personality and background. You can only have one copy of each player in your team, but their development and progress is different for each one. Also, you can equip them with an array of elements, from special sneakers to tattoos, that improve their game skills. There are also cards which you can use during the match.

each team is a group that evolves in itself, gaining experience and progressing through 30 levels, during which new game elements such as uniform, players, stadiums and cards are unlocked. The more games you play and the more you take part in events and championships the more experience your team will gain and the greater your potential will be. As the players play they get tired, reducing their energy level and thus their performance.

BasketDudes, a decent game that should not be missed, responsive gameplay as all sport games should have.
