One of the primary strategic elements of the game is players managing their party Formation, a 3 x 3 grid split into three columns for front line Vanguard to tank most of the enemy damage, middle lane Assaulters who focus on dealing heavy damage and backline Supporters who focus on helping the party and hindering their enemies. Players are able to choose which of their companion characters go into which position in the formation, giving them the choice of focusing on defence, attack or support with a variety of different formations available.

Once entering battle players have no more control over what happens and combat becomes automated where both sides exchange blow after blow until one side is defeated. Players gain bonuses when winning in battle based on how well they performed and what grade they acquired for the battle, though battles can often be repeated if the player wishes to get the max grade for that fight to earn greater rewards.
